EDITORIAL

It's not all doom and gloom

WELL, that's it - this evening's game marks the end of another season.

For us it is an earlier than expected end - but that is football. However, life for the Blue & White Army hasn't been all doom and gloom this season.

Looking back on the last season is has certainly been one to remember.

We started off in good enough fashion winning the Dockerty Cup. Then came the move into our Bob Jane Stadium, and, after a season living like nomads, at last a place to call home.

Then the now annual reunion with old favourite Alan Davidson who brought some smiles on the park also.

Another highlight was the reappearance in a green and gold shirt by club skipper Paul Trimboli who went on to steal the show by being our best player against New Zealand.

Kevin Muscat returned 'home' after a stint in England and he too has seen a recall to the national squad for that midweek, and highly controversial game, against Chile.

The Johnnie Walker Cup brought plenty to drink about and after a good run we took out the final against Newcastle Breakers, back in the league after one season off.

That was our second trophy and that revival of form also brought big crowds back to the Bob Jane on a regular basis.

And that's the best thing, other than the two silver mugs, to come out of this season.

The Blue & White Army is back to its old strength.

Playing in front of big crowds is great.

It provides huge atmosphere, something for which the South Melbourne support is rightly renowned.

It also helps to lift the team, giving them an extra half yard, and an extra ten percent of effort.

And it can also intimidate the opposition.

That in itself is often worth an extra goal.

But the inaugural Ericsson Cup itself has also been an unqualified success.

This has been a great season for soccer in general and everyone involved in the game is looking forward to next year.

Then we will have that extra derby game against Collingwood Warriors - games that will revive memories of the big Heidelberg clashes of yesteryear.

That has been missing this season.

But who could ever forget the atmosphere at that last game at Middle Park, the Farewell to the Field of Dreams?

That was as good an advert for Australian soccer as you are ever likely to see.

Now we will be getting another dose of that only this time at the new Bob Jane Stadium.

Stick on the atmosphere, build on the limited success of this season and keep on cheering.

Remember its not all doom and gloom - and what is for us won't go past us.

Ready for the transformation

THE EVENTS of the last few weeks have certainly cast the spotlight on South Melbourne - even if, unfortunately, it was for off the field activity.

Frank Arok has gone. Four simple words which convey so much.

What do you do when your club announces a coaching change? Do you jump for joy, do you stare in amazement or do you just reflect on the future?

In reality, I suppose that you do a little bit of all of the above.

It's easy to stick the knife in and say that this is the start of a new era; that South Melbourne will go on to bigger and better things; that a new coach will bring success at last.

But it isn't like that. Frank Arok did his very best for this club at all times - no one should ever doubt that.

But South Melbourne isn't any old club, it is the biggest club in Australian soccer and with that comes an extra mantle of responsibility.

The rewards of success are big - but there is also a price for failure.

And at Bob Jane Stadium failure is measured both on and off the pitch.

Not making the Grand Final is bad news, not making the Top Six is a national disaster.

Maybe Frank penned his own obituary when he said that he was going to make Bob Jane Stadium a 'graveyard'.

We know what he meant; that he was going to bring back that invincibility when playing at home. But in the end his own prophecy crept up and bit him in the bum.

Now Angie Postecoglou is at the helm in a caretaker role and our former captain will be making his own claim for the job on a permanent basis.

There will also be members of the playing staff going out this evening to make their own lasting impression.

At stake for them are contracts for next season.

Frank Arok has unearthed some exciting new talent, of that there is no doubt.

There is also no doubt that a new era for the club has dawned.

General manager Peter Filopoulos agrees with that.

"This is a big club," he says. "But we need success."

"We will probably try and bring a few new faces into the team for next season, maybe sign a few experienced players."

Because that is what the club has lacked.

We have all said it so many times before this season, there is nothing wrong with the talent on show but it does lack the steady influence of more experienced players.

I don't have any doubts that that ingredient will be added successfully for next season.

Blame circumstances, blame whatever you like but I believe that Arok HAS laid the foundations of that new era.

In future seasons we will see some of our young talent ripen to become outstanding players.

But what we need more immediately is a Top Six place.

South Melbourne has to be there every season.

Of that there is no doubt. So, enjoy the football tonight in the fabulous Bob Jane Stadium - and come back next season to see the transformation of a young team into a title challenging team.

Puma King football boots are quite simply the best you can buy. It's why you'll find many of football's greatest players wearing them.

The highest quality Pittards leather ensures greater water resistance so they remain light in wet weather, and increased ventilation means they'll dry faster and stay more supple for maximum player comfort.

And King's engineered Duo-flex outsole provides running shoe flexibility while still maintaining rock-solid stability.

CURRENT FORM:

It was that 4-2 loss at Breakers Stadium back at the beginning of March which put the Blues behind the eight ball - maybe some kind of revenge for the Johnnie Walker Cup final.

However, South have a superb home record while the Breakers are notoriously poor travelers. With Vaughan Coveney making a brilliant return from that bad ankle injury there is potency in the forward line again.

But the game will boil down to a result for the side with most pride at stake.

PREDICTION:

South Melbourne to win by two goals.
